At the second battle of Bull Run a recruit who had just joined a New York regiment turned round upon his captain as an order was given, and asked:

"Say, Cap, what are we going to do now?

"Move by the flank to the left of the regiment." way the reply. 'All right, justs as soon move as not."

After the company had held its new position for a quarter of an hour, there came another order, and the recruit asked:

"Say, Cap, which way now!" "Going to advance."

"All right I m with you."

The company moved forward with the line and was presently engaged with Jackson's men. They had not been at it over five minutes when the recruit slid up to the captain and shouted:

"Say, Cap, holler as loud as you can and let's see if I can hear you."

"What in-do you mean? Back into line with you!" shouted the

"All right, Cap-all right! The reason I wanted you to holler was to see if I could hear your voice when you ordered a retreat! It's all right, I guess I can hear it if them rebs don't bring up any more guns."
